VOYA NUI

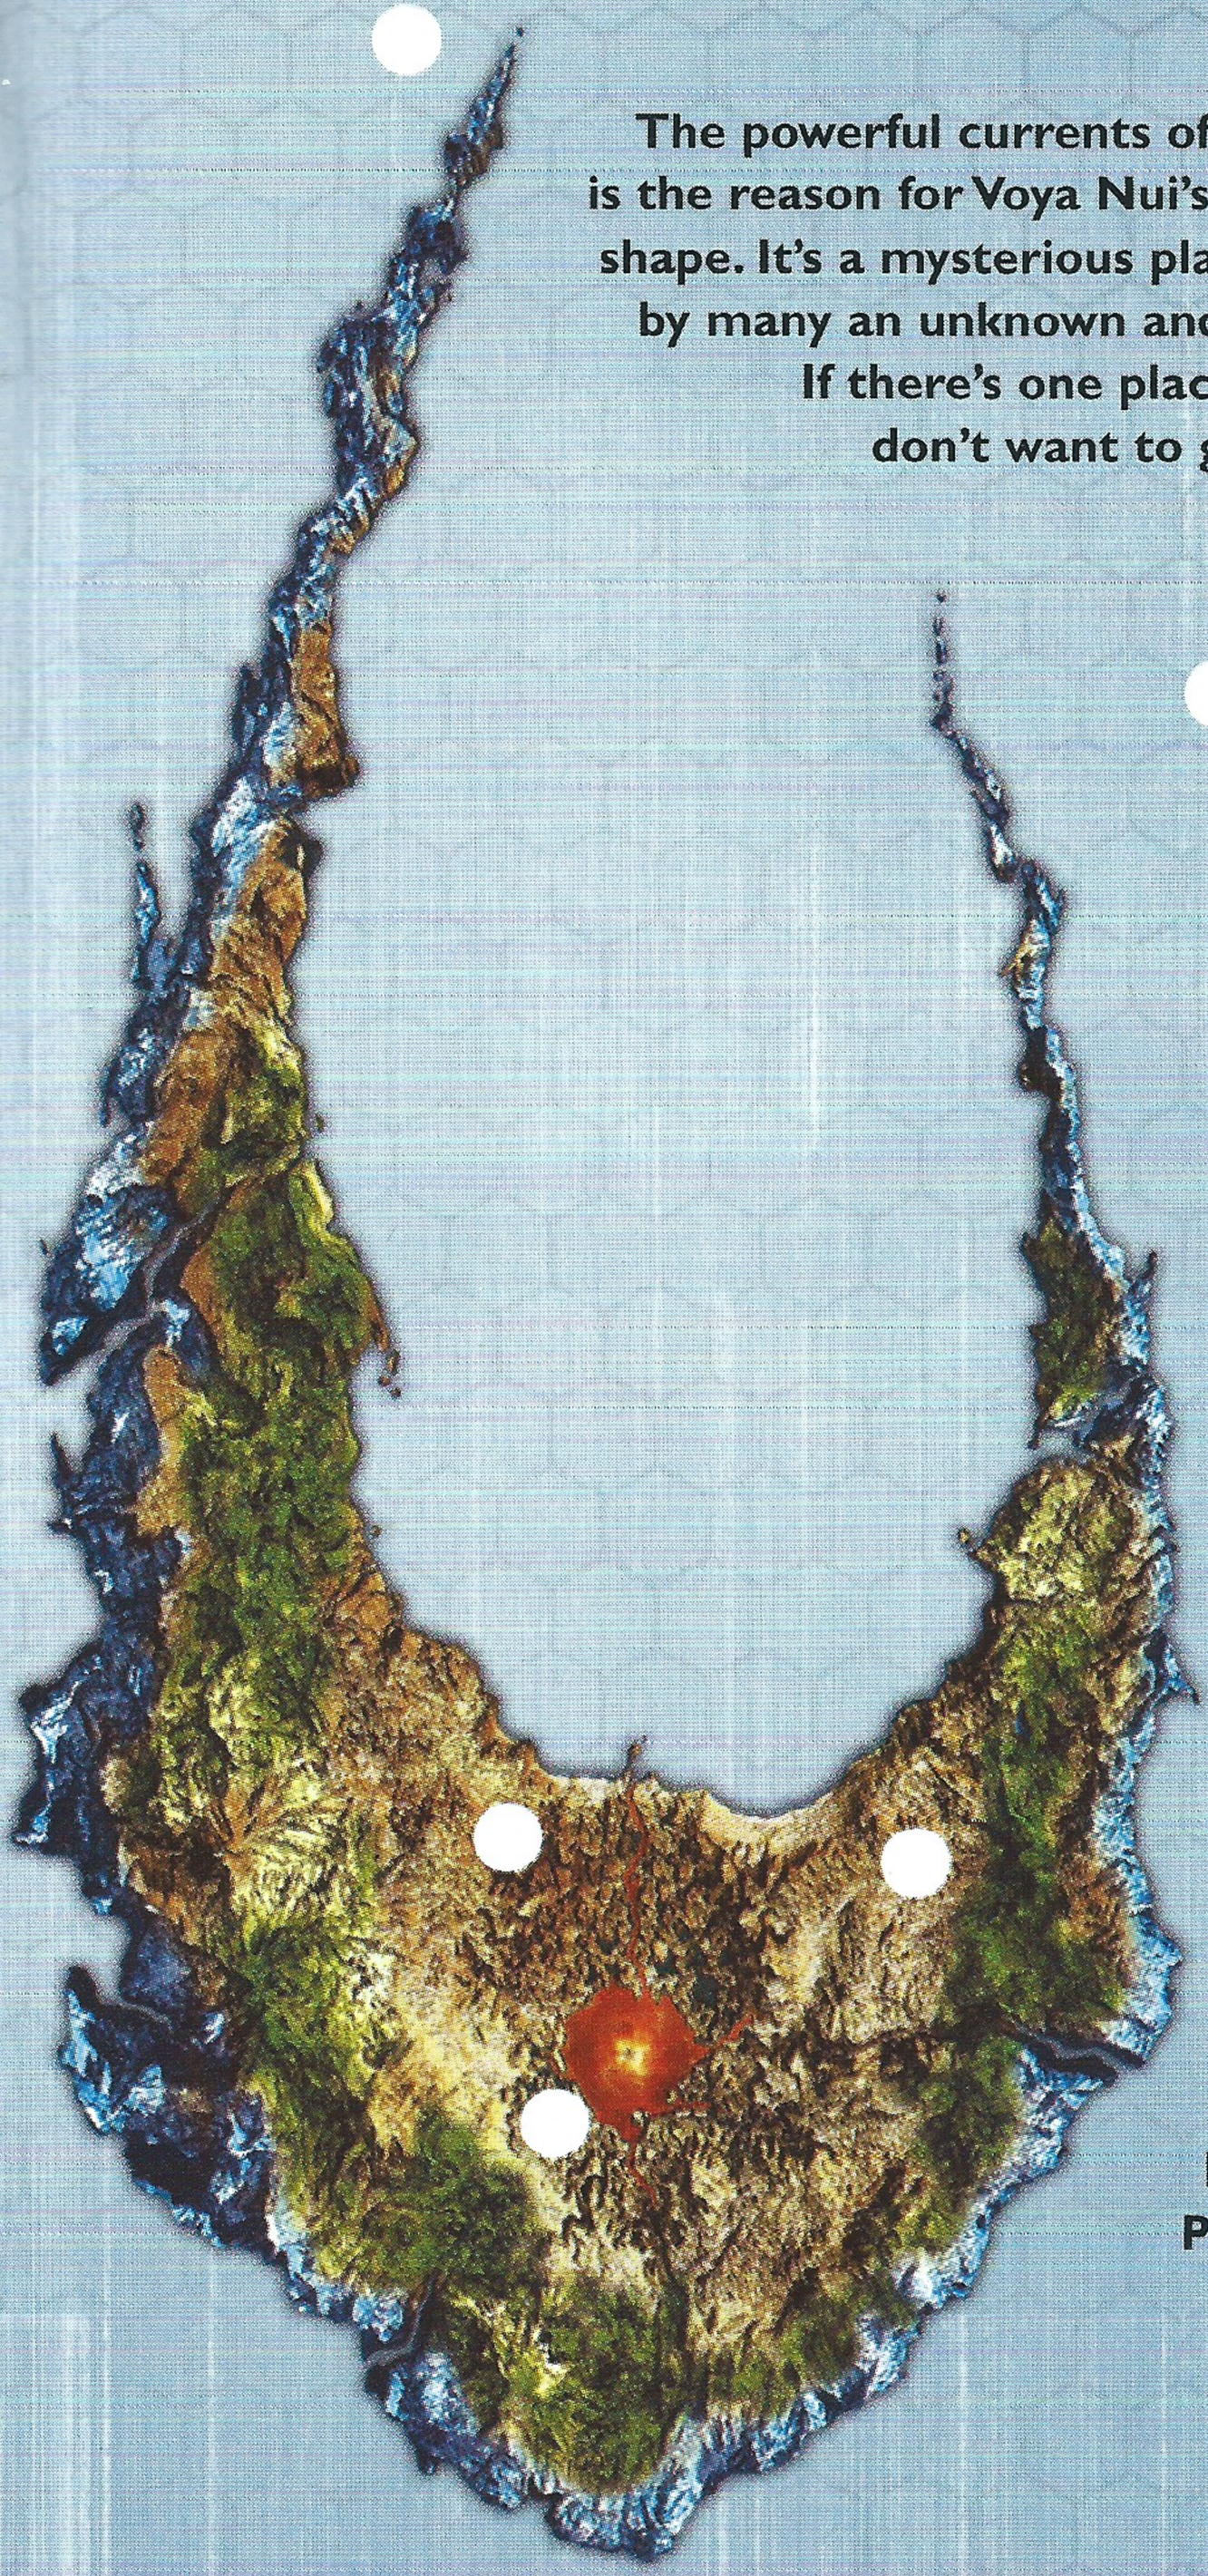

The Island of Voya Nui was once a part of Metru Nui, home of the Matoran and their Toa defenders. Following a terrible volcanic eruption, the island broke free from Metru Nui and now floats in the ocean, hiding a treasure more precious than any other – the Mask of Life.

Can you connect these labels to the correct areas of Voya Nui?

Cape of No Hope - a name given to this ill-fated western tip of the island by the Matoran. Anyone moving beyond this point will be lost forever.

The Lake of Lava is Voya Nui's only source of energy and the sole reason the island and its Matoran population is still alive. But it's running out of power.

The powerful currents of The Sea of Blackness is the reason for Voya Nui's streamlined, arrow-like shape. It's a mysterious place told to be inhabited by many an unknown and dangerous creature. If there's one place the Matoran don't want to go, this is it.

The underwater lava river: this is where the molten lava from Voya Nui's burning core disappears into the sea where it begins to harden and has formed a long underwater cord.

Piraka Virus Plant is the Piraka's stronghold where they store their virus and produce their ammunition zamor spheres.
